

The "Man's Store."

Official Weather Report—Fair and continued warm to-day.

This is the D. J. Kaufman special offering for Easter. Two hundred fifteen-dollar new Spring Suits for $11.75

It means a clear saving of $3.25, for every suit is worth $15, and would easily bring the price. They are special "M. S. M." productions—the latest models of spring—and are shown in the smartest of the new striped and overplaid worsteds. You're sure to want one—and may be two or more—for you'll never have another such opportunity.

From now until Easter the suits are just $11.75.

JAIL NOT FOR ERNY

Widow Finds Young Son Obstacle in Her Way.

WOULD UNLOAD HIM ON STATE

Judge De Lacy Learns Lad Is Not Incorrigible and Declines to Send Him to the Reform School—Cousin Kate Cherished Wrong Four Years Old—Don't Like of Country.

Maternal affection of the quality so popular with sympathetic writers—that blind, deathless faith in the offspring surviving potholes, court, jail, penitentiary, and gallows—is a tender and beautiful thing; but it is often more beautiful than real, as was shown in a case yesterday before Judge De Lacy in the Juvenile Court, when Mrs. Beulah Adorita Jackson sought strenuously to have the State undertake the care and bringing up of her twelve-year-old son Ernest.

Having looked into the case previous to its coming up in court, Judge De Lacy refused to commit the pitiful little pick-aninny to a reform school, for the simple reason that it appeared on investigation that the mother, a young widow, was about to move into new quarters, where she intended to occupy but one room and where the youngster would be in the way, this being, apparently, her real reason for wanting to dispose of her one and only.

She Can't Do Nuthin' Wid Him.

But this was not the reason advanced in court. Nay, nay; nothing like that for Beulah. She appeared with several alleged witnesses to back her assertions as to the incorrigibility and incomprehensible wickedness of little Erny, and pleaded with the court to put him away out of mischief.

"Ah jes can't do nuthin' 'tall wid him. He won't go ter school, an' he goes out in de ebenin' an' stays 'till eleven an' twelve er'clock. He spends all de money he makes sellin' papers an' cavors aroun' wid de mos' scari'ous boys in de block."

"Doesn't he ever save any of de money he makes sellin' papers?" asked the court.

"Sometimes he'll save er dollar an' den he'll take it out an' spend it."

Katie, niece of Beulah and a neighbor, took the stand to tell what she knew to help incriminate Erny, who sat snivelling in the front row of seats, and looking reproachfully at his mother and relatives.

Katie Nevah Seen Nuthin'.

"What do you know about this?" asked the court of Katie.

"Ah knows he's er bad boy."

"What have you ever seen him do?"

"Ah ain' nevah seen him do nuthin'."

Ah knows what his mother done tell me 'bout him."

"I don't want to know what his mother told you. What do you know from your personal experience with this boy?"

"Well, all Ah knows puzamally is dat he ain't very prudent, and takes money."

"Takes money? Has he ever taken any from you?"

"Yassuh."

"When was it, and how much did he take from you?"

"He tuk some change from mah book 'bout fo' years back."

"Four years ago. How much did he take?"

"He tuk 12 cents."

"Let's see. Four years ago he was eight years old, and he took 12 cents. On the strength of that you consider him an incorrigible. Is that all you know?"

"Yassuh."

"You may retire."

Mother Don't Sturb Him Much.

Ernest came forward, and after his frightened sobs had been quieted by kind words and questions on such irrelevant subjects as trees and birds and kites, he was asked to tell his version of the affair. By artful questions, the court drew forth a story radically different from that told by his fond mamma.

"How long have you been selling papers?"

"Eber sence Ah was eight years ole."

"How much do you make?"

"Ah makes 'bout two bits er day mos' days."

"What do you do with it?"

"Ah spend some ob it, but Ah takes mos' ob it home an' sabbes it."

"What do you do with what you save?"

"Mah mother spend it foh my clothes."

"Do you earn all your clothes?"

"Yassuh."

"What's this about your going out at night and staying out until after 11 o'clock? Is it true?"

"No, sah; Ah ain' neber been out 'till eleven. Sometimes Ah sells night pay's and dat keeps me out 'till long 'bout ten."

"Does your mother treat you well? Don't you love her?"

"Yassuh; she don't sturb me much. Sometimes she gets kinder mean, an' Ah runs from her an' hides, but she don't mean ter hurt me none."

He Don't Likes De Country.

"Which would you rather do, go back to your mother or go to a nice place down in the country, where you will be taught to work with your hands and become a useful member of society?"

"Ah'd radder go home. Ah likes 'de city an' don' likes de country."

Very well, Ernest. I am going to dismiss the case without hearing any more witnesses. You, Mrs. Jackson, have not shown that this boy is an incorrigible, and he has shown, not only by his words, but by his demeanor, that there is more good than evil in him. It would do him more harm than good to send him to the reform school where he would associate with many boys worse than he is. Take him home and try to be patient and loving, and see that he attends school regularly. I'll put him on probation."

With a decidedly resigned expression, Mrs. Jackson took her young hopeful by the hand and led him forth into the sunlight.

"SANS-PAR"

Men's $3 Shoes

The word means what the shoes are—"WITHOUT EQUALS"—without equals at their price in the shoe world.

See the new styles—low or high cuts. They're full of VIM, SNAP, and the extreme up-to-dateness that strongly appeals to dressy men.

Consider the quality. Uniformly good upper leathers. Every stitch and every hidden part honest throughout. The celebrated long wearing, flexible "KING OAK" Soles.

Speaking of Supply and Demand

Perhaps the letter from our Home Office which follows was not intended for outside cars.

But we're rather proud of it—of our own little share in the achievement—so here it is:

Syracuse, N. Y.

March 16, 1907.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co., Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen: We closed to-night one of the best week's business in the history of The Smith Premier's existence, the shipments for the week being between 1,100 and 1,200, and the orders being practically the same. Shipments for the month have averaged between 160 and 170 machines a day, and the orders have averaged 195 a day.

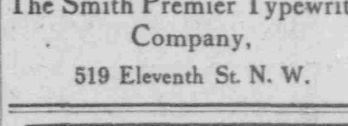

Yours very truly,
